WORKING TOGETHER ON BUILDING EFFECTIVE AND SUSTAINABLE SERVICES FOR RURAL CANCER PATIENTS IN NSW.

For the first time, the Cancer Institute NSW is hosting a “virtual” link-up to enable rural cancer services and their health professionals to contribute to a facilitated discussion on building effective rural cancer services for the future.

This event will be facilitated through video conferencing connecting various rural sites via the NSW Health Telehealth network to explore the current challenges in delivering cancer services in regional and rural NSW. It will include a “real life” rural patient scenario with an interactive panel discussion mediated by Dr Norman Swan a multi-award winning broadcaster and journalist, to discuss models of care, programs and funding / policy directions which aim to improve rural cancer service delivery. There will be an opportunity for “virtual” participants to contribute comments and questions for discussion.

Places will be limited so please book your place by completing the online registration form. Registrations close Friday, 23 April 2010. Check www.cancerinstitute.org.au/NSWOG for further information.
